By: Aijima, Reona; Yamashita, Yoshio. Clinical & Experimental Dental Research. Dec2023, Vol. 53, Iss 12, pp 1-10. 10 pages. Language: English. DOI: 10.1016/j.cerd.2023.101111. Abstract: Objectives: Maxillomandibular fixation requires the jawbones to remain static. Mechanical clearance is required to maintain the stability of the fixation. This study aimed to evaluate the effectiveness of perioperative oral hygiene management using a cetylpyridinium chloride- dipotassium glycyrrhizinate- and tranexamic acid-based mouthwash as an adjunct to mechanical oral hygiene in patients with orthodontic fixed appliances. Design: A randomised controlled trial. Setting: A dental clinic. Subjects: 40 patients with orthodontic fixed appliances. Interventions: The study group received a cetylpyridinium chloride- dipotassium glycyrrhizinate- and tranexamic acid-based mouthwash (CPD-KGR-TX) as an adjunct to mechanical oral hygiene. The control group received a placebo mouthwash. Measurements and Main Results: The study group showed a significantly higher percentage of plaque index (PI) reduction compared to the control group. Conclusion: The use of CPD-KGR-TX as an adjunct to mechanical oral hygiene significantly improved oral hygiene in patients with orthodontic fixed appliances.
